Time: 9:30 a.m. – 11:30 a.m.

Venue: The School Hall, Munsang College, 8 Dumbarton Road, Kowloon City, Kowloon.

Descriptions

If you have watched Harry Potter film series, you would probably know the magic of Harry Potter's cloak, which can make him invisible and help him escape from many dangers. Is an invisibility cloak possible in reality? The talk will answer the interesting question with mathematics.

Mathematics World Lecture Series (19): Graph Theory and Puzzles

Speaker: Dr CHAN Kai-leung of the Department of Mathematics, the Chinese University of Hong Kong

Date: 2 April 2016

Time: 10:30 a.m. – 12:30 p.m.

Venue: The Hong Kong Space Museum Lecture Hall, 10 Salisbury Road, Tsim Sha Tsui, Kowloon, Hong Kong.

Descriptions

Graph Theory is the study of graphs, which are mathematical models used to study pairwise relations between objects. From solving puzzles like Sudoku and wolf sheep cabbage problem to studying classical mathematical problems, they all relate to graph theory. In this talk, the speaker will introduce graph theory in a recreational approach and have an appreciation of the mathematics concepts behind.

Mathematics World Lecture Series (20): Polynomial, Knot and Invariant

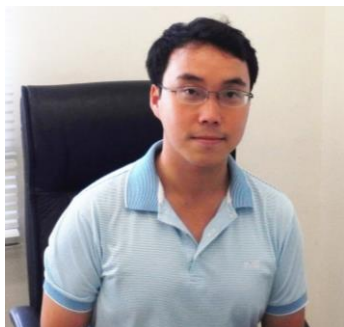

Speaker: Professor WU Zhong-tao of the Department of Mathematics, the Chinese University of Hong Kong

Date: 16 April 2016

Time: 9:30 a.m. – 11:30 a.m.

Venue: Recital Hall, Hong Kong City Hall, 5 Edinburgh Place, Central, Hong Kong.

Descriptions

This talk gives an in-depth discussion of methods and tools that are used by mathematicians to study knots. The speaker will introduce the idea of invariants; in particular, a way of associating polynomials to different knots. Then he will demonstrate how we can use polynomials to answer various questions about knots and vice versa.

The talk will be conducted in English.

Mathematics World Lecture Series (21): Boolean Algebra with Karnaugh Map and its Application on Circuit Design

Speaker: Dr SUN Pak-kiu of the Department of Mathematics, the Baptist University of Hong Kong

Date: 30 April 2016

Time: 9:30 a.m. – 11:30 a.m.

Venue: Function Room AC1, 4/F, Hong Kong Cultural Centre Administration Building, 10 Salisbury Road, Tsim Sha Tsui, Kowloon.

Descriptions

The circuits in computers and other electronic devices receive inputs, each of which is either a 0 or a 1, and produce outputs that are also 0s and 1s. Circuits can be constructed using the basic rules of logic, first given by George Boole in 1854, and these rules form the basis for Boolean algebra. Also, Karnaugh maps will be introduced to minimise the number of sums and products that represents a Boolean function, which is important in the design of efficient circuits.

“Life-wide Learning” – Poster Design, Cartoon Character Design and Writing Competition

Details of Competition

The Competition is organised by the Education Bureau (EDB).

1. Background:

- “Life-wide Learning” is a strategy which extends student learning from the classroom to other learning contexts. It aims to let students learn beyond the classroom and acquire different essential learning experiences, namely, Moral and Civic Education, Intellectual Development, Community Service, Physical Development, Aesthetic Development and Career-related Experiences, in authentic contexts. Engaging in diverse “Life-wide Learning” activities, students are enabled to find out their interests and potential, develop and apply various generic skills as well as nurture positive values and attitudes in order to achieve whole-person development.
- To enable every student to enjoy ample “Life-wide Learning” opportunities, the Hong Kong Jockey Club Life-wide Learning Fund (the Fund) was jointly established by the EDB and the Hong Kong Jockey Club Charities Trust in 2002. It provides funding to primary and secondary schools to subsidise the financially needy students to participate in “Life-wide Learning” activities organised or recognised by schools so as to foster a more holistic development among these students.
- In alignment with the ongoing curriculum renewal of the “Learning to Learn” reform, the new phase of the Fund has taken “Fit to Learn, Serve to Learn” as its theme, and will put more emphasis on adopting a healthy lifestyle through physical activities, as well as providing students with more opportunities for community service to nurture caring mind and relevant generic skills for life-long learning.

2. Objective:

- To encourage students to give full play to their creativity in designing posters and cartoon characters as well as writing to present their reflection on various “Life-wide Learning” experiences and their accomplishments so as to achieve the impact of deep learning and foster whole-person development.

3. Target:

- All primary and secondary school students in Hong Kong.
